1. The following is a quotation of the first paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall contain a written description of the invention, and of the manner and process of making and using it, in such full, clear, concise, and exact terms as to enable any person skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and use the same and shall set forth the best mode contemplated by the inventor of carrying out his invention.

2. Claim 19 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, as failing to comply with the written description requirement. The claim(s) contains subject matter which was not described in the specification in such a way as to reasonably convey to one skilled in the relevant art that the inventor(s), at the time the application was filed, had possession of the claimed invention. The disclosure as filed does not teach that the entire female part is disposed above the outer surface of the bottom wall, as now required in claim 19. In fact Fig 4 as filed appears to show portions of the female part extending below or at the same level as the bottom wall. The limitation now added to the claims thus constitutes New Matter.
3. The text of those sections of Title 35, U.S. Code not included in this action can be found in a prior Office action.
4. Claims 18-19, 21-22 and 24-34 are finally rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b or e) as anticipated by or, in the alternative, under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as obvious over Myszka et al. Note the rejection in the first office action. Thus, the retention devices of claim 18 are the materials of construction of the relevant surfaces that facilitate the retention by friction of the female part to the inner surface of the disc retaining post. Additionally, with regard to this element and the additional limitations in the other claims requiring male/female or snap fit retention devices, the examiner finds that these are all well known structures or methods of connecting two parts together. Given, the teaching in Myszka that the two parts are to be connected together by friction, and given the knowledge in the art of these additional ways of connecting two parts together, it would have been obvious to employ the male/female, snap fit or other known retention devices in the apparatus of Myszka, for the purpose of more securely holding the elements together or as a design expedient. As to the above noted element of claim 19, it would also have been obvious to provide the device of Myszka with this feature, as a design expedient, or in order to form a more compact, and thus more economical device.

5. Applicant's arguments with respect to the claims of record have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.
6. Applicant's amendment necessitated the new ground(s) of rejection presented in this Office action. Accordingly, THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. See MPEP § 706.07(a). Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the date of this final action.
